

Chance meeting leads to wedding

Horseman & Pincus

By JENIFOUR JONES
Go Get It Events and Weddings

Bill Pincus was living in Lexington and Lindsey Horseman was living in Indianapolis when a chance encounter in Louisville brought them together.

Lindsey was in Louisville for a funeral, and Bill was in town for a wedding. Both went out to Brendan's after their respective ceremonies, and while Lindsey was waiting for friends to arrive, Bill walked in.

He stepped up to the bar, and there was an instant attraction. However, when one of Bill's friends asked who Lindsey was, Bill said she was his "future wife," but the word "future" was drowned out by the sound, and all Lindsey heard was "wife." Somehow Lindsey had found herself married within minutes of meeting Bill.

Lindsey was not amused. Bill later built the nerve up to tell her he had meant to say "future," and she forgave him.

The two started dating and within a year, Bill moved to Indianapolis to be with Lindsey. Later that year, they were engaged.

It was very important for them to have their wedding in Louisville. They both have family around the country in California, New York, Cincinnati and all over Kentucky, and they felt Louisville would be the perfect place in the middle.

As a hairstylist, Lindsey has a pretty grueling schedule of all-day appointments. She was not able to spend every day working on the wedding, so she hired a wedding planner.

From the beginning, Lindsey and Bill knew they wanted to have a fun, personal, simple wedding that reflected their personalities. They wanted to join friends and family members and give the day a relaxed vibe. They wrote their own vows, and Lindsey's cousin even got ordained and performed the ceremony.

Lindsey and Bill were involved in every detail of planning the wedding, they both remained calm, even when the weather called for rain. Luckily, the rain held off and it was a perfect day.

After a honeymoon to St. Lucia, Lindsey and Bill are living in Indianapolis.

Style File

Wedding planner
Jenifour Jones
Go Get It Events and Weddings
www.GoGetIt.org

Photographer
Todd Nichols Photography

Florist
Nanz and Kraft Florists

Ceremony and reception location
Gardens at Ray Eden

Caterer
Masterson's Catering

Entertainment
The Dickens Band and Commonwealth Orchestra

Cake
Plehn's Bakery

Rentals and tent
Reliable Rentals

